

Organizations spend a full day caring for the House Edmonton and area organizations and families support Days of Caring at RMHCNA

(September 30th, Edmonton, Alberta – For Immediate Release) Today, over 50 ATCO employees will be swapping their ties and uniforms for aprons and crayons as they participate in a Day of Caring at the Ronald McDonald House in Edmonton.

“A Day of Caring involves an organization, family, or group coming in and preparing meals for the day, creating and participating in activities with the families and helping out with the needs of the House”, says Martin Dugas, CEO of Ronald McDonald House, “It’s a great opportunity for people to connect with the families here and gain a better understanding of how the House helps to keep families close during their most difficult times.”

This year ATCO has chosen the Ronald McDonald House as one of their charities for the ATCO Epic campaign, and employees are giving not only a financial donation, but rolling up their sleeves to participate as volunteers for the House. They will be making breakfast, lunch and dinner with recipes from their Blue Flame recipe book.

“It’s nice to see how our relationships with community partners can be mutually beneficial, and community members can really share their own identities and initiatives with the House,” says Suzanne Pescod, Director of Communications with the Ronald McDonald House. “We are very excited to have the ATCO Epic team participate in a Day of Caring.”

If you or your organization are interested in participating in a Day of Caring, you can contact the Ronald McDonald House by calling 780-439-5437 or visit www.rmhcna.org for more information.
